Welcoming Messages

Robert Salomon

▶ Vice Dean, Dean of Executive Programs, NYU Stern School of Business

▶ Academic Director, AGLP

Now more than ever, senior business leaders are faced with the challenge of promoting growth and driving innovation in a constantly changing global environment. During SRW&Co.'s leadership program, business leaders from the ASEAN region will have the opportunity to engage with our renowned faculty and participate in interactive sessions to help further prepare them to navigate the new global landscape.

The SRW&Co. 2022 ASEAN Global Leadership Program (AGLP) at NYU Stern will focus on four main themes: Globalization, Leadership, Innovation, and Technology. These topics will actively engage participants as they consider the main challenges that leaders and organizations face in a rapidly changing global business landscape.

A global outlook and an innovative mindset are critical when it comes to navigating uncertainty—allowing leaders to transform challenges into opportunity. During the AGLP at NYU Stern, we will start by discussing the current outlook for globalization, as well as emerging areas of risk. From this foundation, we will explore new, innovative approaches and technologies that can help leaders tackle today's greatest business challenges. By the completion of the program, participants will be equipped with approaches, ideas, and frameworks that they can apply in their own firms to harness innovation while realizing long-term strategic goals.

As one of the preeminent hubs of international business, New York City serves as the ideal location for the 2022 AGLP, with its focus on innovation in a global context, and we are delighted to be able to welcome the program and participants back to our campus in December 2022.

Raghu Sundaram

Dean,
NYU Stern School of Business

On behalf of the NYU Stern School of Business, we are delighted to welcome back the SRW&Co. ASEAN Global Leadership Program to our campus in December 2022.

At NYU Stern, we recognize that the only constant is change, and that executives can harness this perspective to realize new opportunities. This is more true now than ever before. While deeply connected to the energy and business community in

New York City, Stern also has a strong global outlook. South East Asia plays a significant role in driving economic growth and innovation across several industries, thereby transforming the global business landscape both in the region and globally.

Once again, in collaboration with the SRW&Co. team, we look forward to a week of thoughtful discussion and a lively exchange of ideas.

Daniel Wong

Chairman & Partner,
SRW&Co.

This flagship AGLP edition is the first on campus edition that was launched after a 2-year break due to the global COVID pandemic.

As the world economy gear up to recover from the post pandemic impact, so must organizations and leaders gear up to lead in these turbulent times. Hence the theme for this edition is aptly entitled: Leading Through Turbulent Times.

We are very pleased to renew our collaboration with NYU Stern to run a 2nd edition of our AGLP in December 2022. We had a very successful run of our 1st edition of AGLP in collaboration with NYU Stern in April 2018. The program evaluation feedback we received from the participants was very positive in terms of the program design and delivery.

We had redesigned the program with careful selection of timely topics and a panel of world class NYU Stern faculty to deliver an impactful learning experience for the participants. The week-long program agenda will comprise class room lectures, company visits and a gala dinner. The participants will benefit from multiple sources of intellectual stimulation and exposure by engaging in a rich discussion and exchange of ideas and experiences with the world class faculty of Stern, and with the AGLP cohort comprising senior leaders from the ASEAN countries.

We look forward to welcoming another cohort of senior leaders from the ASEAN countries to our AGLP in Stern amidst the holiday season of New York City this December.

Opening Ceremony & Program Overview

SESSION 1 The Future of Globalization

Taught by Professor Steven A. Altman and Professor Robert Salomon

Over the past half-century, globalization has fostered an increasingly interconnected world. International trade and multinational corporations now play more than twice as large a role in the world economy as they did just a few decades ago. Meanwhile, as we have entered the digital age, international data flows have skyrocketed, creating yet another means of enhancing global interconnectivity. However, despite staggering advances along various dimensions, globalization is under threat from multiple sources. This course addresses the prospects for globalization. Participants will learn about the past, present, and future of globalization, while developing the ability to strategically navigate a rapidly changing global landscape.

SESSION 2 Emerging Models and Policy Responses in the Global Economy

Taught by Professor Viral Acharya

As global shocks continue to impact the international economic landscape, individuals, business, consumers, markets and governments are feeling the effects. With the recent introduction of expansive fiscal and monetary policies, there are ongoing and potentially permanent changes in business models, the pace and composition of economic activity, the way we think about economic activity and governance. This session will explore the paradoxes in the financial impacts and policy responses to address these shocks. Looking ahead, how should central banks and governments revisit their recent policies and positions and consider the long-term consequences? What have we learned about economic vulnerabilities and building resilience? How will business models change? How can we invest in resilience and robustness against low-risk and high-cost shocks in the future?

Tuesday, 6th December 2022

SESSION 3 The Business Case for Sustainability

Taught by Professor Tensie Whelan

Delivering sustainability and creating a world in which meeting the needs of today's global population does not come at the expense of the needs of future generations, is one of the biggest business opportunities since the industrial revolution. As companies around the world operate in a rapidly changing global ecosystem and are held to increasingly demanding environmental and social standards, the executives that lead these companies need to understand how these environmental and social factors affect their business. This session discusses key sustainability issues and strategies, and helps participants understand how to embed sustainable business practices as a financial win for their organizations.

SESSION 4 The Future of Fintech

Taught by Professor Kathleen DeRose

We are ten or more years into the technology transformation of finance. "Fintech" refers to financial sector innovations involving technology-enabled business models that facilitate disintermediation, revolutionize how existing firms create and deliver products and services, address privacy, regulatory and law-enforcement challenges, provide new gateways for entrepreneurship, and seed opportunities for inclusive growth. The Fintech label also refers to increasingly automated approaches to the main financial intermediation functions: payments, capital raising, remittances, managing uncertainty and risk, market price discovery, and mediating information asymmetry and incentives. In today's Fintech businesses, consumers bank via mobile apps integrated into social media, initiate trade electronically, and robo-advisors make decisions about investment portfolios. This session considers the state of the Fintech discipline and its likely evolution moving forward.

Wednesday, 7th December 2022

Site Visit to an Iconic New York Financial Institution

New York City is synonymous with finance and is a global hub for fintech. AGLP participants will tour an iconic American financial institution and will speak with finance industry leaders around financial regulation, monetary policy, and financial trends and how they affect the growth potential of world economies.

SESSION 5 Strategic Impact of AI, New Technologies, and Enterprise Value Taught by Professor Robert Seamans

Corporate investment in artificial intelligence has increased dramatically over the past five years. But, in order to derive value from investments in AI, firms also need to invest in additional physical, digital, and human capital. This session will provide a framework for understanding how to identify these important complements. This session will provide participants with a set of strategy and management frameworks that firms use when assessing how to implement AI in their own organizations, how to use AI as a competitive tool in the marketplace, and how to interact with government regulators and other stakeholders.

Thursday, 8th December 2022

Site Visit to a Technology Firm

Downtown New York City is known as Silicon Alley, encompassing the city and region's high tech industries including internet, new media, telecommunications, digital media, and software development startups. Venture-backed startups based in the greater New York City area raised more than $50 billion in 2021, last year, doubling the amount raised in the year prior.* These startups have made New York City a hub of creativity, entrepreneurship, social responsibility, and sustainability. Participants will visit a top New York City based technology-driven firm and engage firsthand with these innovative leaders to gain practitioner insights.

*EY, February 9, 2022

SESSION 6 Artificial Intelligence, Platform Strategy and the Web3 Economy Taught by Professor Arun Sundararajan

Platform business models and AI are transforming economic activity in industries ranging from real estate and transportation to financial services, energy, and healthcare, leading to a broad digital transformation of the economy. Innovations around "Web3" technologies (blockchain, NFTs) seem to hold promise but business impacts have been slow to arrive. This session will unpack the different forces shaping the economy of the future, and using examples from industries that include food and beverage, hospitality, media, retailing, telecommunications and transportation, provides a clear framework for understanding the effects of AI on the future of work, crafting platform strategy and navigating the emerging world of Web3.

Gala Dinner and Certificate Ceremony

Friday, 9th December 2022

SESSION 7 The Agile Organization in the Time of Disruption Taught by Professor Anat Lechner

How can firms continue to succeed today and in the future when faced with current and ongoing disruptions, radically evolving business models, and the continuous technological transformation? How can participants act as leaders of an agile organization in this environment? This session examines the impact of various technologies on existing models and resulting change caused to the entire value chain. Participants will discuss the resulting business implications from the pressures on innovation to needed talent changes and the shift towards ecosystem strategy. Through an exploration of how companies embrace agile practices and cultures, participants will reflect on their current model of management at their firm, and the steps required to sustain and advance business resilience, adaptation, and leadership.
